Magnetic field gradient echo imaging of diffusion of bile acids through the perfused rat liver. Gradient echo echo-planar (GE-EPI) magnetic resonance (MR) imaging was used to evaluate the possible use of bile acid perfusion MRI to study biliary disorders. Male Wistar rats were perfused in situ with 500 ml of solution containing gadodiamide or manganese chloride (MnCl₂) as paramagnetic contrast agent, and bile acids were introduced after an equilibration period of 30 min. MR images were acquired at a field strength of 4.7 T in order to calculate signal intensities and to examine image contrast changes after bile acid perfusion. Gadodiamide perfusion showed significantly (P < 0.05) higher signal intensities compared with manganese chloride perfusion. Our News Julius Hobson was born in 1823 in Suffolk, England, and his parents were unable to provide a good education for their son. Julius wanted to be an engineer, so his father gave him permission to study at the University of Cambridge. Despite his father's wishes, Julius attended the University of Leeds to study for a law degree. He attended lectures but also spent his time writing poetry and reading for fun. At age 21, Julius moved to London and joined a partnership firm that was in the process of completing the construction of a railroad. Unfortunately for Julius, the firm went bankrupt after six months. He returned to his family in Suffolk and never went back to live in London. In 1843, Julius met the famous author and politician Charles Dickens and they immediately began a close friendship. Dickens, who was himself an aspiring writer, provided encouragement to Julius and his writing. In 1846, Dickens published Nicholas Nickleby in serial form. Julius' poetry was included in the collection. Nicholas Nickleby was a major hit for Dickens. He followed it with two more of his "Nickleby" novels, The Old Curiosity Shop and Dombey and Son. In 1850, Dickens wrote a play called
